The Publisher's Claims Sustained
UNITED STATES COURT OF CLAIMS
The Publishers of Webster's International Dictionary allege that it "is, in fact, the popular Unabridged thoroughly re-edited in every detail, and vastly enriched in every part, with the purpose of adapting it to meet the larger and severer requirements of another generation."
We are of the opinion that this allegation most clearly and accurately describes the work that has been accomplished and the result that has been reached. The Dictionary, as it now stands, has been thoroughly re-edited in every detail, has been corrected in every part, and is admirably adapted to meet the larger and severer requirements of a generation which demands more of popular philological knowledge than any generation that the world has ever contained.
It is perhaps needless to add that we refer to the dictionary in our judicial work as of the highest authority in accuracy of definition; and that in the future as in the past it will be the source of constant reference.

Drying preparations simply develop dry catarrh; they dry up the secretions, which adhere to the membrane and decompose, causing a far more serious trouble than the ordinary form of catarrh. Avoid all drying inhalants, fumes, smokes and snuffs and use that which cleanses, soothes and heals. Ely's Cream Balm will master catarrh or cold in the head easily and pleasantly. All druggists sell the 50 cent size. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.
The Balm is used without pain, does not irritate or cause sneezing. It spreads itself over an irritated and angry surface, relieving immediately the painful inflammation.
Ely's Cream Balm contains no cocaine, mercury nor other harmful drugs.

Saving the Company.

By CARLETON HAZZARD.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

After a long line of incompetent stenographers Bradley congratulated himself when Alice Fuller took her place at the typewriter desk, and as though by magic the crooked places were made straight.

So quietly did the girl slip into the routine of the office and so unostentatiously did she accomplish results that Arthur Bradley did not realize all that she was doing. He had only the pleasant feeling that at last the office was running straight, and, manlike, he took the credit to himself.

It had been a struggle to get the office going at all, for the firm was in opposition to the trust, and everything possible was done to break up the newly established branch office.

More than once Bradley had narrowly escaped some trap laid for him, but for every blow struck at him he gave back as good. The letters from the home office were encouraging and intimated that if he would round out the first year there would be an increase of salary as well as the present of a block of stock.

The biggest feather in his cap was when the home office turned over to him the task of securing a contract for some $2,000,000 worth of material.

"Such big contracts are usually handled from the home office," he explained to Alice Fuller as he gave her the letter with instructions to place it in the private letter file in the safe. "If they turn this matter over to me it is a sign that they have faith in my judgment. It's going to be a ticklish matter to figure on all that material at a price that will be low enough to capture the contract and still give us as much of a profit as possible."

"They probably realize that you are close to the contract, and they know that they can trust you," answered Alice. "It shows that this branch is becoming important."

She went quietly about her work, but there was a happy light in her eyes, for she was as much pleased at this sign of confidence as was Bradley himself.

Alice was not a girl of impulses, but she had come to have more than a liking for Bradley, and she took a pride in his success.

The week that followed was a busy one. Bradley figured far into the night on the problems of cost, and each morning he gave to Alice the results of his work, to be tabulated on the machine and filed in the safe until the figures should be complete. It was weary work with all the specifications and blanks, but at last the estimate was complete, and Bradley took it on to New York in person for the approval of the home office.

He was jubilant on his return. The president of the company had congratulated him on the excellence of his work and had hinted that the new London office might be opened soon with Bradley in charge.

But the jubilation was short lived, for two days later a long letter came from the New York office instructing the branch to alter the estimates in accordance with a set of figures some 10 per cent in advance of the original estimate.

"Here's a job for you," growled Bradley as he took the paper to Alice's desk. "I'll have to do as the home office says, but it's throwing away the contract and my chance of promotion."

"Are you certain that it is the order of the New York office?" asked Alice as she took up the sheets. "You know that this contract will mean a great deal to the trust if they are able to take it away from us. It means a great deal more to us to retain it."

"That's just it," complained Bradley. "They know that if we lose this contract we lose our fight for an independent existence and shall have to sell out to the trust at their own price. If we get it, it will mean that we can beat them and hold our own. Yet they raise my figures."

"And it would be worth a great effort to beat us," went on Alice. "Suppose that the trust people had some one planted in the home office who could copy the figures and send them to the trust officers. Suppose, too, that they supplied the people with our letter heads and envelopes. We would be unsuspicious and change the bid in accordance with instructions, only to find out that we had been duped after the bids had been opened and the contract awarded to the trust. I think you will find that they have bid only slightly lower than this, but much higher than your original figures."

"That's possible," admitted Bradley. "I'll wire the home office and find out."

"And warn the traitor in the office that his plans have been discovered?" reminded Alice. "They will then bid below your figures and get the contract anyway. It would be best to hold on and take chances by yourself. It will be the only way to hold the contract."

"If I only could be sure," exclaimed Bradley. "But I can't act on mere guesswork."

"This is something more than guesswork," insisted Alice. "In the first place, this letter is mailed from the Madison square station. That is in the building in which the trust has its main office. Our letters all come from the Wall street station, four or five miles away and nearest our office. They are using the same make of typewriter President Hammond's stenographer uses, but it is not the same machine. On the letters from our office there is a piece broken from the cross of every 't.'"

"I think you are right!" cried Bradley as he compared two letters. "We'll pop in the original estimate, and when they come to open the bids out our trust friends will have a dozen fits."

"But answer this letter and say that changes have been made in the bid in accordance with instructions and that the bid has been submitted," directed Alice. "Then the traitor will not become alarmed and notify the trust to put in the lower bid."

"You're the general," cried Bradley admiringly. "I am only the second in command until this is straightened out. Do just as you please."

That evening a letter went to the home office reporting that the changes had been made as directed, but Bradley personally took to the office of the contracting company the original bid.

Two days later a long telegram arrived from the head office demanding the explanation of the changes to which Bradley made reference. It was Alice who wrote the telegram in reply, explaining what those changes were, and who wrote the second message declaring it to be impossible to alter the bid to the old figures, as they directed by wire.

The next morning President Hammond stamped into the office shortly after Bradley had come in.

"I came out on the fast train to see what it all means," he cried. "You have ruined the company by letting yourself be fooled in this fashion."

For reply Bradley brought out the letter he had received. It startled Hammond, for beyond question it was on the paper of the company and not on a cheap imitation. He sighed as he laid it down.

"I suppose that you cannot be blamed," he said dispiritedly, "but it means that the company is smashed by a trick of the trust."

"Not yet," declared Bradley, with a laugh. "Miss Fuller's quick eyes saw through the trick. We took a chance and put in the original bid. I think you will find that we are the lowest bidders, for the trust felt safe in keeping up their bid."

"If we win, you can have the London office next month," declared Hammond.

"Excuse me a moment," said Bradley as he slipped out to the outer office.

"It's a go," he announced beamingly. "Miss Fuller says that she will come—as Mrs. Bradley."

"Rather sudden?" asked Hammond.

"It's sudden only in the recent realization that I have loved her ever since she came into the office," explained Bradley. "It took this crisis to force the fact home."

Alice looked in at the doorway.

"The Washington people telephone that your estimate has won the contract," she reported demurely, and to her great embarrassment Bradley kissed her under the approving eyes of the president of the company.

"We've tricked the tricky trust," he cried, "and we're going to London on our honeymoon."

"On my yacht," added the president. "We can't do too much for the girl whose clever brain saved the company. You're a lucky man, Bradley."

"Don't I know it?" cried Bradley. "I knew it first."

Lungs and Long Life.

One of the most remarkable cases of longevity on record was that of an Englishman born in 1483, whose delicate appearance made all the doctors give him up when he was in the cradle. His chest was so narrow, says the report, that he seemed to have difficulty in breathing. Well, this young moribund, condemned by the doctors to die in short order, died in 1651 at the age of 169. He saw the reign of ten kings. Secundi Hango, consul of Venice at Smyrna, measured only fifty-seven centimeters around the chest, and one of his lungs was diseased. Nevertheless he lived to the age of 115 years. He was married five times and had forty-nine children. When he was 100 years old he got his wisdom teeth. When he was 110 his hair turned black again. At 112 his eyebrows and his beard turned black.

Lucky In One Way.

"The late Valerian Gribayedoff," said a Chicago art editor, "was one of the first American newspaper sketch artists. On that account he leaves behind him a famous name. As Gribayedoff said himself the last time I visited him in Paris, his fame was due not to his great artistic skill, but to his luck in coming first. And he added, with a laugh, that it was always lucky to come early and avoid the rush, instancing the case of a restaurant on the Boule Mich, in the Latin quarter, where a young poet had a large tureen of soup spilled over his coat one evening. The waiter, in response to the savage outcries of the poet, said good naturedly:

"'Oh, well, you needn't alarm yourself, sir. There's no harm done. Our soup never stains after half past 7.'"

All In Red.

The playwrights over their supper of lobster boasted. "I," said the greatest of them, with a complacent glance at the two pure pearls in his shirt front, "decree the color of every actress' frock."

"That is carrying the regard for detail too far," said a playwright who had failed.

"Not a bit of it," said the other. "If I didn't decide on the color of the dresses the stage manager would. Why, that must always be done. Otherwise, in their overmastering desire to draw all eyes to themselves, every actress would wear bright red. In my first play the frocks were forgotten in the general excitement, and at the first dress rehearsal all six actresses came on in the discovery scene in scarlet gowns."—New York Press.

THE HINDOO FAKIR.

His Patience and Skill In the Bag and Spear Trick.

The feat known as the bag and spear trick has been considered one of the greatest of the Hindoo magician's art. In this trick, says a writer, the Hindoo fakir has his assistant get into a sack, the mouth of which he firmly secures, and then unceremoniously hurls his helpless victim to the ground. Without a sign or warning the fakir drives his spear through the center of the bag.

After withdrawing his weapon, upon the point of which no blood stain appears, the fakir stands and gazes dreamily over the heads of the spectators. The body within the bag flounders about as if in mortal agony. At last, when the occupant is apparently dead, the fakir again plunges his spear into the motionless body. The same antics are repeated. Then the fakir releases his attendant from the bag, and he steps out without a scratch upon his body.

Although the trick is performed with all the carelessness imaginable, it calls for more patience, skill and exactness than any of the so called black art achievements. From the time the attendant enters the bag both fakir and assistant count every breath they take. When a stated number of breaths have been taken the fakir makes his thrust, and the occupant in the bag is prepared to avoid it. Then the count begins again, and at the proper time the spear is driven through the bag a second time. In order to evade the spear and make it appear to pass through his body the assistant doubles up in as small a form as possible. His legs are drawn up close, with the chin resting upon the knees and the arms folded round the lower limbs across the shins. When in this position, at the fiftieth breath, the spear passes under the attendant's arms between the abdomen and the thighs.

The slightest miscalculation by either the fakir or his assistant would mean a serious if not a mortal wound for one and an unheard of disgrace for the other.

That fakir and attendant are able so to train themselves to breathe in perfect unison while giving one of these performances, when the slightest variation in time by either would be fatal, is certainly wonderful.

SOUVENIR FANATICS.

Nothing Is Safe From Those Afflicted With the Craze.

In these enlightened days anything from the limb of a tree to a table napkin is liable to be carried away as a souvenir.

A western girl with a well defined case of the souvenir habit, sojourning in New York, was dining at a fashionable cafe and, being prepossessed in favor of the cunning pewter cream pots with which the tables were supplied, calmly carried one away in her muff. Can you imagine her self valuation when upon examining her prize later on she discovered carved across the bottom, "Stolen from M.'s?"

A Pittsburg bachelor, wandering into a restaurant, came upon a friend just seating himself with two ladies. The bachelor was invited to join the party, did so, and at the end of the luncheon insisted upon paying the costs. The bill being wrong, he went to the cashier's desk to personally adjust the discrepancy, where he was informed that the extra charges were for spoons which the ladies had put in their hand bags. And that was the first time he had ever met them!

Upon the occasion of the presentation of a handsome silver service by one of the United States to a battleship which was being christened in her honor an elaborate banquet was served aboard ship, at which the service was used. Society came en masse from the town near which they were anchored, and after the function was over there were not enough forks and spoons with which to lay the tables. And yet these souvenir fanatics would draw their moral skirts aside for fear of contamination with a real thief.—Bertha Reynolds MacDonald in Bohemian Magazine.

He Didn't Care.

A Georgia man tells of the meeting of a negro "literary society" in that state. During the consideration of the business part of the club's programme some one had proposed that the regular time of meeting be changed from Tuesday to Friday, and this proposition provoked much disputation. Finally, the president of the society being appealed to for his opinion, that official declared with much gravity:

"Membahs of de s'ciety, pussonally, now, pussonally, I don' care which night de s'ciety meets, but fo' myse'f I prefers Tuesday."—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Fish Food and National Greatness.

There is not the smallest reason to suppose that a meat eating nation would be superior either in intellect or physique to a fish eating one. We as a race were never stronger than when we fed on fish to such an extent that the careful guardian of the newly entered apprentice commonly inserted a clause in his indentures stipulating that he was not to be required to eat salmon more than three days a week. —London Globe.

Beating a Retreat.

"What is necessary when you wish to beat a retreat?" asked an old military man at Fort Washington.

"I suppose you'd have to retreat faster than the other fellows," was the reply that came after some deliberation.—Philadelphia Press.

Evils that are passed should not be mourned.—Italian Proverb.

Wm. H. Taft of Ohio Our Next President.

Wm. H. Taft of Ohio, Secretary of War under the present administration, will without a doubt succeed Theodore Roosevelt on the 4th of next March as President of the United States. At the Chicago Convention late Thursday afternoon he was nominated on the first ballot to lead the Republican hosts to a sure and sweeping victory in November. He received 703 out of the 985 votes cast in the convention, and his nomination for the highest gift in the hands of the American people was made unanimous. The nomination of Taft was an endorsement of the policies of President Roosevelt, which he stands pledged to carry out. These policies are the outcome of present-day problems, which were referred to at length by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, the permanent chairman of the convention, after he had taken up the gavel. The Senator in the course of his speech, in which he referred to the economic evolution of the past fifty years, said:

"Science and invention, the two great factors in this situation, have not only altered radically human environment and our relations to nature, but in their application they have revolutionized economic conditions. These changed economic conditions have, in turn, affected profoundly society and politics. They have led, among other things, to combinations of capital and labor on a scale and with a power never before witnessed. They have opened the way to the accumulation of wealth in masses beyond the dreams of averice and never before contemplated by men. * * * It is the huge size of private fortunes, the vast extent and power of modern combinations of capital, made possible by present conditions, which have brought upon us in these later years problems portentious in their possibilities and threatening not only our social and political welfare, but even our personal freedom, if they are not boldly met and wisely solved."

When and Where Will it End?

Despite hard times one could not but notice that the theatres and places of amusement both in San Francisco and the interior towns kept right along doing big business. Whether the fun-loving public has acquired such a habit of being amused that it is now as essential as a meal does not seem improbable and yet it may be but a "whistling through the graveyard" process with those who would forget their troubles during these times of tight money. Whatever the cause the theatres have seemed to be the money-getting concerns throughout it all and some of the box office receipts have been tremendous right in the midst of the hard times. Now, however, those same theatres have begun to cut expenses and hard times is on display even there where the orchestra used to play. In many of the leading theatres are naught but vacant chairs, where the 'ceiloist, the director and the drummer used to sit, for the musicians have been dispensed with and we must imagine the opening overture, the selections from the operas and be content with the low lights without soft music when the heroine tells the story of her life. The theatrical managers blame the musicians' union for its extortionate demands. This game of freeze-out in all lines is the cause of the chill which has been passing over the nation in all lines of trade and business. When and where will it end?

Vallejo Has Troubles, Too.

Vallejo is the old dog who refuses to learn new tricks when the tricks are in the shape of business taxes imposed by the city. For many years the merchants of the navy town have conducted every line of business without turning in a cent to the town revenue, but now an ambitious and thoughtful city council proposes to raise $8,000 per year from those who engage in business within the city's limits. Four hundred dollars per annum is expected from the pool rooms, three hundred from the gas and electric company and two hundred from the breweries. Sonoma is not the only place which has its troubles in regard to licenses, and Vallejo has a real problem with its saloons and great white way, all of which is quite unknown to us.

There was a time when old mother Nature could take care of her vales and hills and streams, but since man has worked her to a finish it now is necessary for him to renew soils, replant forests and replace the stock which he has been clever enough to take from the streams. We have an instance of this in our splendid fish hatcheries and in the reported activities of the State Fish and Game Commission, whose latest work is the expenditure of the Legislature's appropriation for a fish car. The coach has been thoroughly equipped for the transportation of live fish from the hatcheries to the streams and have also a compartment for fish egg storage. With all the attention being given to this work it looks as if we would have good sport and speckled beauties on the table for many seasons to come.

Will Harvest Fair Crop of Hay.

Notwithstanding the lack of rain in this valley last spring the hay crop on the Pacific Reclamation Company's ranch in the lower end of the valley will be a fair one. Superintendent Jos. Keechler estimates the yield at between seven and eight thousand tons, which is a good showing when it is considered that last spring was practically a rainless one in the lower end of the valley. At the close of March it looked as though the crop would be a failure but a few light showers in May and the foggy mornings helped the crop out amazingly.

Late Sunday Afternoon Train Service.

It is not generally known that since the new time schedule of the Northwestern Pacific Railroad went into effect last month that a late Sunday afternoon train service has been put on between all points on the line from Glen Ellen to San Francisco. This train leaves Glen Ellen at 6.10 P. M. and Sonoma at 6.31 P. M. every Sunday until further notice. This is in addition to the train which leaves here at 4.02 P. M.

Sensational Elopement.

A sensational elopement is reported from El Verano in which a young girl of that place and a young man of Glen Ellen figures. The elopement took place Tuesday and the last seen of the young couple they were headed in the direction of San Francisco.

Card of Thanks.

The Sisters of the Presentation Convent extend most sincere thanks to the many kind people of Sonoma and vicinity who so generously and cheerfully aided in bringing to a successful issue their entertainment of the 16th inst.

Jack Harper, who was born and raised in this valley, was here from San Francisco yesterday.

Now is the time to lay concrete sidewalks. See Trudgen, the stone mason, about it.

Dr. H. W. Gottenberg is building a new barn to replace the one destroyed by fire a couple of weeks ago.

A. Castex, whose barn was destroyed by the fire of a couple of weeks ago, is building a larger and more costly one on the site occupied by the one burned down.

S. T. Daken, the Glen Ellen artist, has disposed of the fine paintings which have been on exhibition in the Elk's hall at Santa Rosa for several months. The purcheser is a resident of Chicago.

The two-story building erected on Broadway by J. J. Dunbar, the plumber and hardware dealer, is a decided improvement to that part of town. Mr. Dunbar, who moved into his new quarters last week, has had a cement sidewalk laid down in front of his premises which adds much to the attractiveness of his investment.

Dr. and Mrs. Carlton E. Rhodes (Ethelyn Stone) had an amusing experience after they had gone seven miles on the first stage of their honeymoon in an automobile to Agua Calente Springs Wednesday night. About a mile and a half beyond Melitta something went wrong with the stearing gear of the automobile and the machine balked. The chauffeur had to walk back into Melitta and telephone to a local garage for another auto. There was naturally some delay but Cupid was all smiles and in a short time the newly married couple were speeding on their way to Agua Caliente. Had some of their friends known about the incident they would have gone out to the scene of the breakdown and would have showered Dr. and Mrs. Rhodes plentifully with rice.—S. R. Republican.

A Canary Bird in Frog's Stomach.

One day this week while fishing in the smail creek on the Philip Bill place in the eastern suburbs of town, Harry Quartaroli caught an immense frog of the edible variety. It weighed fully a pound and it was noticed that its stomach was amazingly distented. This aroused the curiosity of Mr. L. Quartaroli, who dissected the frog and was greatly surprised to find in its stomach a full-grown canary bird, feathers and all. It had not been digested and all its parts were intact. The question that is now puzzling those conversant with the facts is how did the bird become a prey to the amphibious animal?

BRIDE OF A. S. LUCE CRITICALLY ILL.

Stricken Down in San Jose With Ptomaine Poisoning—Now Out of Danger.

Mrs Belle Eager Luce, the two-week's bride of A. S. Luce, the accountant of the Sonoma Valley Bank of this place, has been lying alarmingly ill in one of the hospitals of San Jose the past week, but at latest accounts had been pronounced out of danger.

Mr. and Mrs. Luce were married in Oakland two weeks ago to-day and it was while on their honeymoon trip that the young bride was taken suddenly ill in the Garden City, and when a doctor was summoned to her bedside he discovered that his patient was suffering from ptomaine poisoning. So dangerous was her condition she was at once taken to one of the best appointed hospitals in San Jose and it was several days before she was pronounced out of danger.

Mrs. Luce had so far recovered the latter part of the week to be able to leave the hospital and at latest accounts was convalescent at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Eager in Oakland.

Shocking Accident Near Melitta.

By the premature discharge of a blast in the Maroni quarries near Melitta on Thursday last Guilelmo Ridolfi and Giovanni Valanigo, quarrymen, were shockingly injured. One of the men had an eye blown out of its socket and the other will probably lose the sight of both eyes. In addition to these injuries both men were fearfully larcerated about the head and face.

The injured men, who are well-known in this valley, after having their hurts attended to by a doctor who was summoned from Santa Rosa, were taken to the La Rosa Hotel in that city, where they are lying in a very critical condition.

Races on the Fourth.

The Sonoma Driving Club will hold a race meet on its track in this place on the afternoon of July 4th. There will be five harness races and two saddle races, for the winners of which liberal purses have been provided. The event will wind up with a grand ball in Union Hall in the evening.

A number of fine trotters from home and abroad have already been entered for the various races which promise to be speedy ones.

CLOSING EXERCISES CONVENT SCHOOL.

Certificates Conferred aad Diplomas Awarded in Presence of Large Number of People.

The commencement exercises of Sonoma's convent school took place in the presence of a large number of the friends and patrons of the school in Union Hall on Tuesday evening. The program of literary and musical numbers, as published in these columns last week, was excellently carried out by the pupils, who reflected credit upon themselves and their teachers.

Following the entertainment graduating honors were conferred on Miss Mary Elizabeth Watt, who had completed the literary high school course.

The following scholars then received grammar grade certificates:

Miss Gilia Elizabeth Dal Poggetto.
Miss Mary Elizabeth Pinelli.
Miss Amelia Josephine Caminata
Miss Amelia Josephine Ciucci.
Miss Alma Clara Dal Poggetto.
Master Joseph Theodore Nessi.
Master Jerome Carlton Jansen.
Master Annibale Peter Maffei.

Diplomas for excellence in business penmanship were also awarded to Misses Gilia Elizabeth Dal Poggetto, Mary Elizabeth Pinelli, Amelia Josephine Caminata and Amelia Josephine Ciucci.

Miss Alma Dal Poggetto was also presented with a certificate for improvement in business penmanship.

The diplomas and certificates were presented to the scholars by Rev Father O'Brien, pastor of St. Francis' Church.

Following the exercises there was dancing, social converse and refreshments, the latter served in the dining room of the Union by the Catholic ladies.

The large hall was taxed to its utmost seating capacity long befo e eight o'clock, after which there was standing room only. It was the largest gathering seen in Union Hall in a long time and we are pleased to note that the entertainment netted the good sisters of Presentation Convent a neat little sum of money and much praise was bestowed upon them by the audience for their admiral teaching of the young.

The Aguillon Will.

Norman J. Heggie, through his attorney, H. B. Mathewson of this place, applied to the Superior Court of this county yesterday for the probate of the will of the late Camille F. Aguillon, who died at his home here about two years ago. The deceased, who was one of Sonoma's oldest and most respected citizens, left a valuable estate when he died, most of which, however, he deeded to his three daughters previous to passing away.

Druidic Home for Glen Ellen.

An effort is on foot to establish a Druidic Home at Glen Ellen. At the session of the Grand Grove just closed at Salinas, a committee was appointed to take hold of the matter and obtain a site amid the vales and hills of the picturesque little town at the head of the Sonoma Valley.

An Evening at the Dunbar School.

There will be a gathering of scholars and the friends and patrons of the Dunbar school this evening, at which a literary and musical program will be presented and refreshments served. Everybody will be made welcome by the teacher, Norvella M. Davidson, and the trustees of the school.

The damage to the optic was caused by the kick of his "pet" carriage horse whose heels suddenly became merry and in the exuberance of his spirits landed a glancing blow on the side of the head of the ex-Mayor, who we are pleased to note fortunately escaped serious injury.

Trout for Our Streams.

One hundred thousand trout are soon to be liberated in the streams of Sonoma by the Fish Commission and the supply of good fish for the coming seasons provided for. Of these there will be 80,000 planted in Big Sulphur creek, 10,000 in Alder creek, a branch of Sulphur creek, and 10,000 in Hale creek

No trout are to be placed in Little Sulphur creek at this time because of the fact that the headwaters of the same have been secured by clubs and private parties and the commission does not intend to supply the clubs with the fish to the exclusion of the general public.

In the very near future Colonel La Motte of the Mendocino hatchery, will also liberate 1,600,000 trout in the streams of Mendocino, Lake and Humboldt counties. He recently sent the first shipment of these to Eureka The trip was made by special train to Sherwood and from there over the mountains to Eureka by automobile. The liberating of the large amount of trout at this time will be a great thing for the sportsmen of the state and there will be some fine fishing in seasons to come.

EUGENE ARAM'S LIFE.

The Remarkable Career of This Famous Murderer.

A SCHOLAR AND A SCOUNDREL

The Hero of Bulwer's Novel and Hood's Poem Was Really a Vile Criminal Who Abandoned Wife and Children and Knew No Remorse.

Eugene Aram, the scholar and murderer who inspired two of the masterpieces of English literature—Hood's poem and Bulwer's novel—was hanged on Aug. 6, 1756.

Aram was born in 1704 in Yorkshire. By the time he was fourteen years old he was regarded in the neighborhood as a prodigy of learning. His fame for piety and gentleness as a scholar spread, and as a result he was invited to Knaresborough to open a school in 1734. There a strange development took place in Aram's character. He formed an association with a drinking, turbulent crowd of men, the opposite of himself, among them Daniel Clark, who kept a little cobbler's shop, and Richard Houseman, a flax dresser.

In 1745 Clark married a woman with a small fortune of $1,000. Immediately he and his companions devised a scheme to rob her and her friends. Clark was to obtain all the goods he could on credit and hand them over to Aram and Houseman, who were to deposit them in a safe place. Then after securing the plunder Clark was to decamp, leaving his wife to shift for herself, and the property was to be sold and divided among the three men.

Clark went about procuring a wide variety of articles on credit. He pretended he was about to give a great wedding feast and borrowed silver tankards, salvers, spoons, etc., from whoever would lend them. As fast as the different articles were obtained Clark, accompanied by Aram and Houseman, carried them to a place called St. Robert's cave.

When Clark had "borrowed" about everything valuable his acquaintances had to lend, the plotters decided it was time for him to disappear. So in the early morning of Feb. 8, 1745, he, Aram and Houseman went to the cave to divide the spoils before Clark left. Aram and Clark had quarreled a good deal during the progress of predatory operations. At the entrance to the cave the quarrel was renewed, and Aram pushed Clark away and rained down tremendous blows on his head and chest. Clark fell dead.

Houseman, terrified at the sight and, as he said, afraid of meeting the same fate, turned and ran away. Aram did not show a particle of remorse or fear. He gathered up the booty and carried it to his house, where he buried part of it in the garden. He buried Clark's body and heaped stones over the grave. In the afternoon he went for Houseman and threatened him if he disclosed the murder and made him believe he was equally guilty in law.

Clark's disappearance was not noticed for a day or two. Then the people from whom he had "borrowed" jewelry and plate began to make inquiries. Suspicion was directed to Aram in some way. The village authorities searched his house and found a bundle containing battered plate and clothing stained with blood. Notwithstanding this, no action seems to have been taken by the authorities, nor was it suspected that Clark had been murdered. The neighbors began to jeer at the learned schoolmaster, however, and Aram suddenly left his wife and children and walked to London.

For fourteen years his family heard nothing of him. He spent the greater part of the time wandering about from place to place, at last finding a situation as usher in a school at Lynn. In June, 1758, a horse dealer who had known him in Knaresborough met him in the Lynn market. Aram denied his identity. By a singular coincidence, almost the day the horse dealer accosted the now gray haired schoolteacher, a skeleton was found by some workmen digging a pit in Thistle hill, in Knaresborough.

A country town has a keen recollection of everything that has occurred to disturb it, and immediately the disappearance of Clark fourteen years before was remembered. Houseman still alive, got drunk first and then joined the crowd of villagers looking at the exhumed skeleton. "Clark," he said with drunken gravity, "was never buried here."

The latter, still too drunk to realize the gravity of his position, muttered that Clark's body would be found in St. Robert's cave. The crowd made a rush for that place, and soon a skeleton was exhumed.

"I did not kill him!" gasped Houseman, now thoroughly sober and terrified. "It was Aram. I had no part."

Houseman was taken to the village jail, and a warrant was sworn out for Aram. When the officers took him away from the school the pupils cried. The government used Houseman as a witness to convict Aram. The latter's speech in his own defense has come down complete—a masterly attack on circumstantial evidence, showing the intellectual power of the man. Aram made a half confession the night before his execution, followed by an attempt at suicide. According to the custom of the time, his body was hanged in chains, and it swung in Knaresborough forest until 1778. Years later, when the details of his crime were dim, his remarkable career attracted Hood and Bulwer, and thus the obscure, talented, perverted man became a part of English literature.—Exchange.

Too Much of a Good Thing.

George Marshall, a philanthropist who always kept a sharp lookout never to be wasteful, decided to go for a week's camping, taking as his guests some ragged street urchins. One morning he used the bits of meat left from the evening before and made hash for breakfast. There was some left over, which he concluded to reheat and serve again at noon.

"Johnnie, will you have some hash?" he asked one lad.

"Bet your life," replied the lad, who was constitutionally hungry.

"Peter, pass your plate for some hash"—to another freckled nosed lad.

"Not if I knows it," was the unexpected reply.

"I thought you liked hash from the way you ate it this morning," replied Mr. Marshall.

"I did like it for breakfast," said the lad, "but none of yer review of reviews for me for dinner."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Sided With Father.

"There is a little chap in our town," said the suburbanite, "whose father and mother have words quite frequently, and have them loud enough to be heard by the neighbors. The burden of their recriminations when audible is, on the wife's part, that she ever lowered the Hicks family sufficiently to marry a Stubbs, and on his part that he ever honored the Hicks family by allying it with the house of Stubbs.

"One day last summer the young son of the house went fishing. He had barely got his line into the brook when he heard his mother calling him.

"'There it is,' said he disgustedly; 'the minute the Stubbses begin to fish the Hickses begin to holler.'"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Lesson In Thrift.

A lesson in thrift is found in the advice given by Congressman John E. Andrus to a young man for whom he had secured a minor appointment in the capitol at Washington. Meeting the young fellow in the capitol, he placed a hand on his shoulder and remarked:

"William, you are just beginning your life. Let me give you a bit of sound advice: When you leave your boarding house in the morning never take more than 30 cents in your pockets, enough perhaps for your luncheon and for car fare. You will then not be tempted to spend more than you can afford."—Yonkers Statesman.

The Romance of Buried Pictures.

A romantic story of a picture purchased at a London auction which on expert examination proved to be painted over a Rembrandt worth £8,000 is curiously reminiscent of the discovery of a Correggio under similar circumstances. A good many years ago two picture restorers, Lovera and Hunterspergh, bought at an art sale in Rome a number of old pictures in order to provide themselves with canvases for reminders. In the division of the spoils Hunterspergh received an indifferent picture of flowers, on which he painted a study of a head. This picture he offered to Lovera, who on close examination found that the new ground scaled off and that underneath were traces of a figure painted in a style that denoted the hand of a master. Replacing the scales and concealing his discovery, he purchased the picture for little more than the value of the canvas. Removing the two grounds, he disclosed an exceedingly clever painting by Correggio, which he sold to the Earl of Bristol for £1,500.—Dundee Advertiser.

Dogs of Luxury.

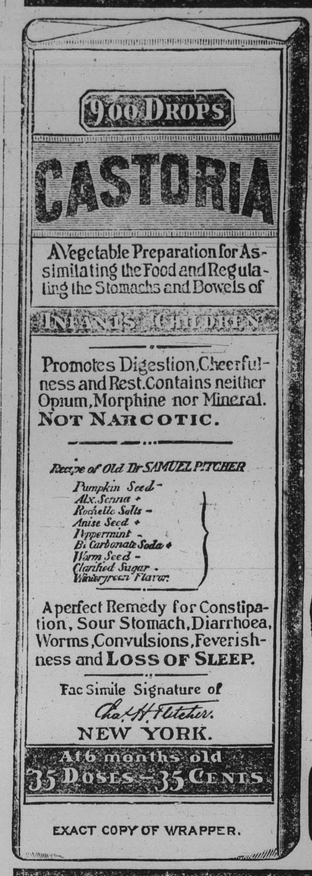

The appearance of little dogs as objects of luxury goes back to the most ancient times. Documents are not wanting that go to show that Greek and Roman women had little dogs which were idolized by their mistresses. Even men, particularly among foreigners, were not ashamed to walk the streets of Rome with pet dogs under their arms. Speaking of this subject, Plutarch relates that Julius Caesar, seeing one day in Rome some strangers thus loaded with their dogs, asked them ironically whether the women of their country did not bear children. Tertia, the daughter of Lucius Aurelius Paulus, was so fond of her dog that in the moment of bidding farewell to her father, who was about to leave his country and his family to wage war against Perseus, king of Macedonia, she frankly admitted that the sadness imprinted on her face was due to the death of her pet dog Persa. In Europe the greyhounds were the first favorites of women during the middle ages.—Boston Post.

Try Preventics, At My Risk With Book on Colds.

Just to prove merit—to show you how quickly Preventics can and will check colds or the Grippe—I will mail you free on request these samples and my book. Simply address—Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. Preventics are thoroughly harmless little Candy Cold Cure tablets. No Quinine, no laxative, nothing sickening whatever. To check early Colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is surely safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterward. Preventics will however reach a deeply seated cold. But taken early—at the sneeze stage—they break or head off these early colds. That is surely better—that is why they are named "Preventics." Promptness however is all-important. Promptness in the use of Preventics may save half your usual sickness. Feverishness, night or day, with child or adult, suggests the need of Preventics. Write Dr. Shoop, Racine Wis., today for samples and booklet. Preventics are sold by
